

The XXYY Project (a project of AXYS), is searching for families with boys, teens or men who are diagnosed with 48, XXYY Syndrome.

If you know a XXYY family, please refer them to:
genetic.org/variations/about-xxyy/
Email: xxyyprojectsupport@genetic.org

The XXYY Project serves families world-wide. We provide support, foster research and build referral resources for these families. In 2016, the XXYY Project will have world-wide gatherings of XXYY families on every continent. We want to include all of the families we can find through this outreach effort.

48, XXYY Syndrome is sometimes known as a “variant” of Klinefelter Syndrome (XXY). However, more recent research shows that XXYY is different. XXYY families have been supporting one another since 1998 and yet we still have many more families to find.

Males with XXYY have similar features. If you know a boy or man who looks like those in this flyer, please refer them to a doctor or geneticist for testing.

The XXYY Project is a project of AXYS, which is the association for x and y chromosome variations. AXYS serves people with all types of x and y chromosome variations including Klinefelter Syndrome (XXY), Trisomy X, XYY and the more rare of these conditions such as XXYY, XXXY, XXXXY, XYYY and others. Those patients should be referred directly to AXYS at genetic.org for support and information.

